The school house doors have again been opened to the pupils, after having been closed for several weeks on account of the influenza prevalent in town.—Services were resumed in the Methodist Church last Sunday. The pastor's theme for next Sunday will be: "Is Life Worth Living?"—The fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was held at the parsonage last Saturday, the district superintendent presiding. The usual election of stewards and officers took place. The envelope system was adopted and a finance committee appointed. Nearly all the old officers were reelected with a few new members added to the official board. Reports showed the work of the church had made good progress during the year. After the transaction of some important business the conference adjourned.—All cases of the influenza in the Boro are reported as recovering.—Goodsell Smith is caring for the residence of E. H. Palmer while he is representing the town at Montpellier.
