

The Center for the History of Medicine

Polio Exhibit

Bibliography

University of Michigan. Media Resources Center.
Media Resources Center (University of Michigan) Records, 1948-1987.

35 linear ft. and ca. 2500 items.
6 linear ft.

Background: The television production studio and media services of the University of Michigan, commonly referred to as "Michigan Media." It was formed in 1978 through the merger of the university Television Center and the university Audio-Visual Education Center. The Television Center began producing educational programs for broadcast on commercial and public stations in 1950. The Audio-Visual Education Center produced films for the university and operated a film distribution library. The Media Resources Center closed in 1986.

Summary: Administrative records including Broadcasting Committee minutes, annual reports, unit review material, correspondence, and budget material; scripts for television programs and films; press releases; telecourse outlines and study guides; and brochures and catalogs; also photographs; and films.

Repository: Bentley Historical Library, University of Michigan

Access note: Finding aid in the library.