Course Description:

The object of the urology course is to expose the student to a broad spectrum of urologic problems. The basic pathophysiology of urologic disease is stressed. The student may choose between four adult urology services and the pediatric urology service. Conferences with the staff and teaching rounds are integrated into the program. Fourth year students applying to a urology residency program or with a strong interest in urology will be required to write a paper and give a presentation at Grand Rounds. Prospective topics suitable for presentation can be discussed with any of the urology faculty.
