

ABOUT YOUR BABY

Some babies, both those born prematurely & full term, need special help to adjust to their new lives. They need different kinds of care than is normally given. Your doctor asked that your baby be admitted to the Holden Intensive Care Nursery for this special care.

Holden is part of the University of Michigan C.S. Mott Children's Hospital. We are committed to providing family-centered care. Your needs are important to us during every phase of your baby's care. Our goal is to provide the best possible care for newborn babies who need special attention.

We are also dedicated to providing outstanding educational training programs and ongoing medical research. In Holden, the research activities are focused on the care of newborn babies. This area of medicine is called neonatology. Through these research efforts we hope to find ways to prevent illness and to improve the care for babies now and in the future.
